These programs are designed to prepare students with an appropriate educational background (i.e., an associate's degree or equivalent coursework) for career opportunities and advancement in business and industry.

All programs address the needs of adult learners who wish to expand or enhance their educational knowledge through an online degree program. Franklin University's curriculum for our Community College Alliance is designed for students who are self-motivated and goal-driven, who also possess a high degree of initiative and maturity to benefit from the learner-centered programs. Franklin University is accredited by The Higher Learning Commission of the North Central Association of Colleges and Schools, which has authorized Franklin to offer complete degree programs through distance delivery methods.

The Community College Alliance Program provides opportunities for students at two-year colleges to complete their bachelor's degree without leaving their local community. Students complete their associate's degree plus approximately 24 semester credit hours of preparation ("bridge") coursework from their local community college. Students also complete a minimum of 40 semester credits of bachelor's degree completion courses online from Franklin University.

*Throughout the publication, "community college" refers to community, technical and other two-year institutions.

PROGRAM OBJECTIVES

Franklin University's curriculum leading to the Bachelor of Science degree is intended to help the student achieve the following general objectives:

- an understanding of the activities that constitute their chosen profession and the principles underlying the administration of those activities;
- the ability to think logically and analytically about the kind of complex problems encountered
- in their profession and how to deal with them appropriately;
- facility in the arts and skills of leadership, teamwork and communication;
- a comprehension of human interrelationships involved in an organization;
- awareness of the social and ethical responsibilities inherent in modern society; and
- skills in the art of lifelong learning that will help the student continue learning.

PHILOSOPHY

"The aim of education is the development of reflective, creative, responsible thought."—John Dewey

Franklin University's curriculum and overall design for its Community College Alliance Program is based on the latest research, pedagogical techniques and androgical principles for designing online, interactive, responsive, collaborative, and expanded learning opportunities to be delivered to learners at a time, place, and in appropriate formats convenient to the learners.

This philosophy assumes a mix of technologies based on an analysis of student needs, content requirements and costs. It assumes a design based on a range of interactions between faculty and students, among students, and between the student and a broad array of media and other learning resources, including current content experts, real world problem solving, and collaborative work groups. Designing with these types of dialogues in mind ensures that the teaching and learning experience is an active and collaborative one.

Good teachers stimulate, encourage, guide and challenge students. Good students are mentally active, involved, and experiment in the real world. Franklin University's curriculum is designed to create the experiences needed to build knowledge, perspective and compassion, and allows students to do it when and where they choose.

DESIGN PRINCIPLES

Curriculum design for our CCA Program is based on these principles:

- The core of education is dialogue and interaction, and balancing the use of the following three dialogues— faculty to student, student to student, and student to resources—promotes an effective learning experience.
- The latest learning research and industry certification standards are used to ensure that learning is focused on outcomes appropriate to student, industry and societal needs. The Program draws upon various advisory committees to provide feedback about skills that graduates need in their everyday work. In this way, the Program stays up-to-date with the changes in business and industry.
- A variety of learning activities and interactions are strategically integrated into the curriculum to build skills appropriate for each student and to build relationships within the learning community.
- Courses use multiple communication medias to enable and encourage active and collaborative learning. These medias include: audio, email, Internet, online seminars, chat rooms, bulletin boards, streaming video, PowerPoint, animation, white board, etc.

NEW STUDENTS

Students who hold an associate's degree from a regionally accredited institution (or 60 semester credit hours / 90 quarter credit hours and a high school diploma / GED) are eligible for admission to the University through our Community College Alliance.

All new students taking Franklin University's online courses through our Community College Alliance must complete Learning Strategies (PF 321), a two-credit-hour, six-week long online learning strategies course. This course is the first of the major requirements and focuses on preparing students for the virtual learning environment they will experience throughout this program and possibly in their careers.

The course provides a safe environment for learning the technology, opportunities to practice using the technology, tools for understanding how one learns and how to adjust learning styles to a Web-based environment and a mentoring/encouraging process between the instructor and students which helps the student to understand expectations and feel comfortable with online learning.

Students practice using various technology, including the Internet, email, chat rooms, bulletin boards, Web pages and Franklin's virtual library.

UNDERGRADUATE/GRADUATE JOINT PROGRAMS OF STUDY

The Joint Programs of Study option affords Franklin University undergraduate students, who are interested in pursuing a graduate degree at Franklin University, the opportunity to enroll in graduate coursework that may serve as university elective coursework in meeting the hour requirements for the Baccalaureate degree. Students pursuing this option generally complete both the Baccalaureate and Master's degrees in less time and fewer semester hours than pursuing the two degrees consecutively.

Acceptance into one of the undergraduate programs of study at Franklin University does not ensure or guarantee acceptance into a Franklin University graduate program. Students must meet the admission requirements of the Graduate Program and be admitted into a graduate program of study in order to pursue the Joint Programs of Study option. Each program of study in the Graduate Program is governed by its respective program criteria and academic standards set forth in the Bulletin. Application for enrollment into a graduate program must be submitted two terms prior to commencing graduate level coursework. Undergraduate students who are accepted into one of the graduate programs will be concurrently enrolled in both the undergraduate and graduate programs. Any graduate course used in the undergraduate area may not be counted if a grade of "C" or less is earned.

It is recommended that students planning to pursue joint programs of study discuss their plans with their Student Services Associate.

REGISTRATION GUIDELINES

Students who are entering Franklin University through a community college alliance may register for classes in one of the following ways:

- Student Portal (my.franklin.edu)
- email: alliance@franklin.edu
- fax: 1.888.625.8678 (toll free) or 614.947.6762
- telephone: 1.888.341.6237 (toll free) or 614.797.4700

After a student has submitted a registration form, course prerequisites will be checked and a confirmation copy of the schedule and fee statement will be mailed to the student*. Students with prior financial balances or financial aid "holds" cannot register and must contact the Business Office.

*When a student registers on my.franklin.edu they will be responsible for printing their own invoice.
